

Directors in glee over super pageant

📅 November 18, 2013 | 📁 Filed under: Fiji News | 👤 Posted by: newsroom

By ZAFIYA SHAMIM

The Pearl South Pacific Resort and Spa in Pacific Harbour, for the second time, is hosting the 2013 World Supermodel Pageant.

World Supermodel Pageant executive producer Gavin Dooley says there will be a spectacular choreographed show highlighting the latest fashions and leading designers from around the world.

"We will have a fabulous week on par with the fashion industry's finest 22 supermodels from over 14 countries and regions vie for the 2013 crown," Mr Dooley says.

He says it is amazing to see all the girls with so much talent and potential.

"This is an international competition for models. The teen category is between 16-19 years and the adult are aged between 20-30 years."

Mr Dooley says this competition started out to find who the leading world supermodels are regardless of their marital status.

"The show will also reveal the world's latest fashions and leading designers from each delegate whilst showcasing and promoting their country's culture and lifestyle to the rest of the world in an honest and fair competition.

"The winner of the World Supermodel Pageant will have the opportunity to promote the healthy lifestyle she lives, the clothes she wears, the beauty products and make-up she chooses as well as her sporting and career interests."

Fiji, Mr Dooley says is a glamorous location that has that wow factor and it is only fitting that it hosts such a glamorous event and group of supermodels.

World Supermodel Pageant executive producer, Gavin Dooley (left), and The Pearl South Pacific Resort and Spa general manager, Natalie Marletta. Photo: PAULINI RATULAILAI